1. INTRODUCTION

Drugs stands for narcotics, psychotropic and addictive substances. Another name that is known and often also called is the drug that is a combination of narcotics, psychotropic and addictive substances. Based on the opinion of experts that narcotics is a kind of substance or drug derived from plants or not plants both natural and synthetic materials.it can cause loss of consciousness or loss of consciousness, and it can cause dependence. Dependence or addiction to drugs will make you mentally (psychologically) and physically unable to stop it.

The impact caused by drug abuse is so massive, it is very significant that preventive measures are taken seriously. Efforts made by the Government of North Sumatra province in the form of legal products were made local regulations, namely North Sumatra regional Regulation No. 1 Of 2019 On Facilities For The Prevention Of Abuse Of Narcotics, Psychotropic And Other Addictive Substances.

In order to effectively implement this local regulation, it is necessary to take concrete steps in the form of prevention so that drugs are not abused by the community and the drug eradication program that is promoted will be successful. Prevention should start with the leading groups of people. Prevention of drug abuse can be done in various ways ' including: guidance and supervision in the family, counseling by competent parties both in schools and in the community, recitation by lama/religious leaders, supervision of night entertainment places by security forces, supervision of illegal drug distribution and other actions aimed at eradicating drug abuse.

2. RESEARCH METHOD

The type of research chosen is normative legal research that is research establish the law as a system of norms. The system of norms in question is about the principles, norms, rules and regulations. Peter Mahmud Marzuki that: 'normative legal research is a process of finding a rule of law, principles of law, as well as legal doctrines to answer legal problems faced. Normative legal research conducted to produce argumentation, theory or a new concept as a prescription in solving the problem at hand. research normative law is also called doctrinal legal research, namely research aimed at to provide a detailed systematic explanation of the rule of law governing the field of specific legal rules, analyze the relationship between the rules of law one denhan the other, explaining the elusive parts of a rule of law and it also includes predictions of the future development of a particular rule of law. Doctrinal legal research is library-based research whose focus is analysis of primary legal materials. This type of research is based on the thought that this study to analyze a system of norms or rules.

3. RESULT AND ANALYSIS

The role of the community is of course the role of the family, community and youth organizations, youth groups, mosque teenagers, etc. Drug Abuse Prevention solutions that must be done is to start from :

- a) Individual, individual factors can be an important part that is by having a strong mental or faith, can be a stronghold of someone refusing to consume drugs, that someone uses narcotics babanyak due to be used as compensation in social life. Like for example his household problems, because of the problem was not able to overcome himself. With a weak/fragile faith, looking for ways to consume drugs.
- b) Socioeconomic problems, social welfare problems, people who do not have a job and a difficult life (poor) become a person who wants to get peace of mind from economic pressure, it will be easy for emotional (too much) to take shortcuts to overcome their problems by seeking diversion (compensation) using drugs. Getting drugs by doing or committing criminal acts.

1. Types of narcotics based on the ingredients consist of:

- a) Natural Narcotics; Marijuana, Opium.
- b) Semi-synthetic narcotics; Morphine, which is derived from Opium is processed mixed with synthetic ingredients.
- c) Synthetic narcotics; meth (amphetamine), ecstasy, cocaine, Heroin, Putau.

2. Types of narcotics according to law No. 35 of 2009 on narcotics is divided into 3 (three) groups, namely :

- a) The most dangerous narcotics of this group-I consist of: marijuana, heroin, cocaine, morphine, opium.
- b) Narcotic Group-II, it has a strong addictive power, terdiridari, pethidine, benzetidine, betamatedol.
- c) Narcotics Group-III, has a mild addictive power, namely codeine .

In order to prevent it from being easy to get the source of drugs / drugs, which is done by applying the law expressly to drug abusers to the public and government officials. An environment that has the potential to prevent drug abuse is in the family and Community Environment. Prevention efforts in the family environment that can be done simply is :

- a) Parents need to have knowledge about drugs in order to inform children about the dangers and adverse effects of using drugs.
- b) Parents / family members do not excessively trust the child that the child does not have a problem. If you see a change in attitude in an unusual child, in order to immediately detect it.
- c) Do not hesitate to supervise and look for the causes of changes in behavior and behavior in your child.
- d) Periodically check the condition of the room (when the child occupies his own room), clothes that are used up (the contents of the pockets, the smell of clothes), school bags and other attributes (to avoid conflicts how to do it in a good way).
- e) Parents should be able to be a good example for their children and at the same time can act as his best friend so that the child can pour out his heart, opinions and problems he faces.
- f) He taught and taught science to his children. So that religious spirit, understand and understand the science of religion.
- g) Implement and cultivate the eight functions of the family in everyday life. This will create a sense of comfort in the child when in the family environment.

Efforts to eradicate drugs will never succeed without involving the community. Prevention efforts in the community by inviting organizations that exist in the community such as youth mosques, youth organizations, youth organizations.

Forms of activities that can be done, among others, to observe the surrounding community environment, for example; a. Whether the police station performs the function of security and public order. Babinkamtibmas from the police in his father played an active role. b. Government offices in sub-districts, villages carry out drug eradication activities. c. Environmental security posts need to be activated in the community environmental security system.

4. CONCLUSION

Facilities for the Prevention of abuse of psychotropic narcotics and other narcotic drugs need to be made immediately in order to be successful. It is very urgent for people who have been addicted to drugs to be rehabilitated. Of Course, The Regulation Of North Sumatra Province No. 1 of 2019 must be implemented firmly.
